

The Anaerobic Baffled Reactor (ABR) treats many different types of wastewater and can be considered an 'improved' Septic Tank (S.13) that uses baffles to optimise treatment. Treatment of the wastewater takes place as it is forced to flow upward through a series of chambers, where pollutants are biologically degraded in an active sludge layer at the bottom of each chamber.

